The University of Nebraska is known and respected all over the nation for its red-attired fans, as well as its football teams.

Nebraska fans also have a nationwide reputation for good sportsmanship, at home and away.

"Big League"-that's the way Nebraska teams and fans have acquitted themselves in past seasons, and that's the same goal for 1981.

The University of Nebraska urges all 1981 fans to continue this fine tradition of sportsmanship by extending courtesy to the visiting teams and offi-

22 Seniors Set for Final Home Game

The Cornhuskers close out the home portion of their 92nd football season this afternoon as they take on Iowa State in an important Big Eight contest. And, as the Huskers go for their seventh-straight win since a 30-24 loss to Penn State, Sept. 26, 22 Nebraska seniors will be making their final appearance before the Big Red faithful—who, in turn, will be filling Memorial Stadium for an NCAA-record 118th consecutive time.

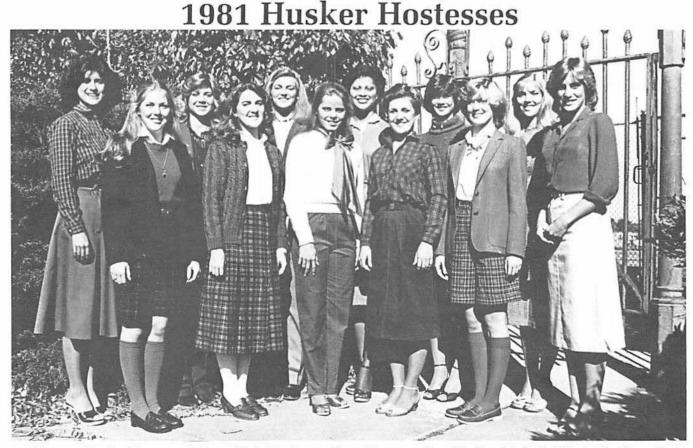

Those 22 seniors, listed alphabetically, are: Phil Bates, fullback, Omaha, Neb.; Matt Brandl, offensive guard, Humphrey, Neb.; Tom Carlstrom, offensive guard, Polk, Neb.; Curt Hineline, middle guard, Bellevue, Wash.; Dan Hurley, offensive tackle, Omaha, Neb.; Brian Iodence, cornerback, Hemingford, Neb.; Jeff Krejci, safety, Schuyler, Neb.; Rodney Lewis, cornerback, Minneapolis, Minn.; Ric Lindquist, cornerback, Plattsmouth, Neb.; Jack Lonowski, defensive tackle, Stromsburg, Neb.; Mark Mauer (co-captain), quarterback, St. Paul, Minn.

Because of red-shirting and junior college transfers, it's difficult to make a precise evaluation of what this group has accomplished together, but using the traditional measurement, the 1981 Husker seniors have been part of teams that have compiled a four-year record of 36 wins against just nine losses, and appear to be heading for a fourth-straight bowl appearance.

On the other hand, Iowa State has seen its bowl prospects dimmed in the last two weeks. Two weeks ago, the Cyclones were rolling along with a 5-1-1 record, had just blown Missouri away. 34-13, were ranked in the top 10, and had only Kansas State and Kansas to prevent them from coming into Lincoln with a 4-0-1 Big Eight record. However, the Wildcats and Jayhawks forgot to cooperate and handed ISU consecutive 10-7 and 24-11 losses. Now, the Cyclones are 5-3-1 and out of the conference title picture—but definitely not out of the bowl scene if they can pull off the upset today, then defeat Oklahoma State next week.

Today's game is the 76th meeting in a series that began with a 12-4 Nebraska win in 1896. Since then, the Huskers have gone on to win 60, lose 13 and tie two. They've won the last three in a row, giving up just one field goal since lowa State won two straight in 1976 and 1977. In 29 previous meetings at Memorial Stadium, the Huskers have won 25.

THE TOUCHDOWN CLUB OF NEBRASKA

One of the groups most instrumental in helping the University of Nebraska Athletic Department grow in the field of intercolegiate sports is the Nebraska Touchdown Club.

Contributions from TD Club members have enabled the Cornhuskers to build a fine grant-in-aid program and continued support from the Touchdown Club, and groups like the Husker Achievement Awards, the Extra Point Club, and the Cornhusker Beef Club, will insure that the Nebraska Cornhuskers will always hold a prominent place in the college sports world.

The University of Nebraska Athletic Department salutes the many members of the Touchdown Club and takes this opportunity

Dr. Louis Leviticus (right), engineer in charge of the NU Tractor Testing Lab, speaks several languages and is a frequent host to foreign visitors. Here he discusses developments in tractors with a Danish agriculturalist.

UNL Ag Programs

by Cheryl Westcott Department of Agricultural Communications

The University of Nebraska's programs in agriculture extend far beyond the East Campus and further than the research facilities across the state. Through the International Programs Office in the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, NU is working with more than 20 foreign countries in cooperative agricultural research programs.

In fiscal 1979, specific grants and contracts to NU for international agricultural programs totaled more than $20 million, according to Dr. Robert W. Kleis, dean of International Programs since establishment of that office in 1976.

The U.S. State Department's Agency for International Development is a principal party to many of these contracts. Funding of NU's largest international ag project, the Sorghum-Millet Collaborative Research Support Program headquartered at UNL, flows through AID. Seven other American universities and eight foreign countries are cooperating in the project which is developing sorghum and millet as human food sources for less developed countries. Funding to NU is $15.5 million for 1979-84.

AID contracts also benefit Nebraska farmers directly, Kleis added. In 1979, the agency spent more than $55 million in Nebraska for grain and other commodities.

Exchange of information with scientists from other countries is another principal benefit, said Dr. Norm Tooker, assistant director. International Programs currently has scientific exchange with 20 countries and numerous joint research projects. One major cooperative effort is a study of swine diseases with Romania.

New varieties of crops also have emerged from exchange of genetic material. NU wheat researchers Drs. Virgil Johnson and John Schmidt have collected wheat varieties from 40 countries and new varieties for Nebraska have resulted from that exchange of germplasm.

Contact with visiting scientists and their own study in foreign countries also benefit NU staff. "They gain a better perspective and I believe they do a better job of teaching when they are more familiar with the soils and climates of other parts of the world. They gain new ideas and can share them with NU students." Tooker said.

Foreign students at NU also gain from exposure to a different culture. Tooker annually leads a bus tour for international students to expose them to agricultural practices in the state. One hundred seventy-five students from 51 foreign countries are enrolled in graduate and undergraduate agricultural majors at UNL.

"These students may do their research in Nebraska or in their home countries. Many are attending NU under the auspices of their governments who are seeking to develop new leaders in agriculture who can bring new practices back home." Tooker said.

Helping less developed countries improve their food production and their economy is a long process, but it may have ultimate benefits for Nebraska farmers, he added. "In many of these countries, people can't buy our agricultural products because of their low incomes. If we can help them to develop their agriculture and their industry, they could become a market for us in the future."

Finally, Tooker does not discount the purely humanitarian aspects of international agriculture involvement. "We have an opportunity to help the hungry and undernourished of the world."

Now, Sonny isn't aware that Natural Light's great taste comes from using only the finest natural ingredients. He just likes the taste.

So if you're looking for great taste in a light beer, take a tip from Sonny and don't fumble around. Just ask your beertender for a Natural Light. It's one light beer you won't want to pass on."

o absorb the full measure of Autumn Fever it helps to grow up in a college town. The very air we breathe there seems to change as the students return and football begins. There is a bite and a crispness to it, partly due, of course, to the change of seasons, but mostly to the renewal of excitement. The town sounds different too. The languid summer days seem almost silent, since summer is played in a low key at a soft tempo. You can sleep to the sounds of summer. Ah, but in the fall, the drums beat again and the horns beckon us. There is band music in the streets again. It is a clarion call, for in college football, as in no other sport, the excitement is orchestrated. A kid growing up in a college town will have memorized all the school fight songs before he reaches his teens, and in the stadium on Saturdays, his young voice will join the collegiate chorus. "Fight on fight on

Youngsters of a certain vintage were reared on romance. The movies they saw extolled the virtues of British soldiers in the boiling desert, of buccaneers on the high seas, of frontier gunslingers, of private eyes in the menacing cities. Victories were achieved against impossible odds, women were rescued from the hands of fiends, the crown was restored to the rightful monarch, the black hats got theirs on the dusty street outside the town dance hall. There were so many heroes-Robin Hood, Sir Francis Drake, General Custer, Harry Faversham of the Four Feathers, Sam Spade, Destry, Wyatt Earp and Doc Holiday-and they all seemed to look like Errol Flynn. College football was a part of this mythology. The home school always seemed to be outnumbered by the much larger visitors. Like David in his epic battle, the home team would depend on guile rather than brute strength to win the day, but win it would. Watch for the long punt return, the last-second desperation pass! Autumn Fever swashbuckling scatback would squirm past the giants, the long spiral would connect in the end zone. How satisfying it was to be a part of something so romantic, the stuff of dreams. A walk on the college campus after junior high school class might even include a chance encounter with the star halfback. And if it didn't, imagination would suffice.

The college football hero loses considerable stature by the time you have become an undergraduate. He might be a big enough man, but he will not seem, as he once did, larger than life. He is no Errol Flynn. More often than not, he will prove himself to be as ordinary in many significant ways as you are yourself. The once mythic figure can be put in perspective. But Autumn brings on the same old feeling of excitement and renewal, and the football hero takes on some of the old dimensions. The cynical pose we may have affected collapses at the sound of the first drum beat. It is as if the entire campus has come alive once more, as if our blood were running faster. The school week might involve academic drudgery, but now there is something to look forward to at its end-a football game. To some, this quickening pace, this elevation of spirit is a new experience. To the kid raised in the college town, it is familiar. But the familiarity does not in any way diminish the experience, it only gives remembered times something extra. This time you are a part of it.

There can come a period, usually some five to ten years after college, when Autumn Fever momentarily loses its sting. These are the years when the graduate turns away from collegiate concerns for fear, perhaps, of not growing up. It is a time for cutting the cord. There are more important matters on the agenda-family, job, possibly just surviving. It is unseemly in these circumstances to act like a kid again. Childish things must be put away, doorways to the past must be tightly closed. Mindless rooting for the alma mater is immature behavior and it should be muted, even suppressed. This is a time when one's maturity is always in question, when one is clamoring to be a part of the bigger world. The approach of fall may yet send a tingle down the spinal column, but it should be ignored as a minor irritant. How difficult it is to be worldly. One apparently certain way is to turn away from the old college town, the home town.

This delusion does not last long, fortunately. The tranquil joys of college days soon assume their proper place. In time, a person is not so afraid of seeming unsophisticated, and there seems little reason to abandon something so pleasurable as the Autumn Fever. Now, one thrills again to the drumbeat. The campus, the stadium take on new allure. There is no shame in being an Old Grad, a fervent rooter. There are reunions to attend, big game parties to go to, games to be replayed until late at night and early in the morning. There is the sense that the old school actually needs your support. It may be that a college team has no more rabid supporter than the middleaged grad looking to recapture his youth. There is no harm in this at all. Fun is fun.

Finally, there is a longer look back. Distance in time lends a certain magic to things that may not have been there before. The long view lends itself to optimism, to a my-school-right-or-wrong approach. The younger zealot often anticipates the worst; the older one sees that everything is for the best. How much sweeter the memories seem with age.

Autumn Fever affects youngsters and "old grads" in much the same way.

Autumn Fever

ABOUT THE AUTHOR—Ron Fimrite, a senior writer for Sports Illustrated, graduated in 1952 from the University of California, where he had served as sports editor for The Daily Californian, the school newspaper. During an 11-year tenure with the San Francisco Chronicle, he was a news reporter for five years and a sports columnist the last six years. He is now into his ninth year with SI.

A joyful feeling is in the air as the fans head for the stadium.

The parties were never livelier, the bands never noisier, the athletes never so stalwart. And yet the kids of today, the descendants of the old heroes, seem just as courageous, just as dedicated. Life goes full cycle, thank heaven.

Autumn Fever is a terminal ailment for some of us, in the sense that we never get rid of it. It afflicts the youngster who slides under the stadium fence to sneak in for the big game and the old grad who proudly waves his season tickets. It may also afflict the athlete himself.

Jackie Jensen and Charlie Justice were contemporary All-America football players in the late 1940s at, respectively, California and North Carolina. Both are in their fifties now, both have had heart attacks and both have had their troubles, financial and otherwise, since their glory days on the campus. Neither lives in the past, but both have a keen sense of their personal histories.

For a time, Jensen coached baseball at his alma mater. He walked the campus as a living ghost to those who remembered his brilliant twisting runs and long, accurate passes. Older heads on the campus would turn in recognition as he walked past them. "Could that have been . . . ?" His mere presence revived sweet memories of another, possibly happier time. A modest man, he downgraded himself as a living legend, but his own memories were rich, and the mere sight of the old stadium on the hill would send them rushing back. When Autumn came, he remembered. "I could see that their linebacker was about to block the punt, so I just tucked the ball under my arm and Justice, driving by Kenan Stadium in Chapel Hill on a fall afternoon, suddenly slaps his hands against the steering wheel of his car and cries out, "I just don't know how to describe the feeling, but I loved it all. I just loved it. The crowds, the cheers. I just loved football." The memory of past glory made that day. It is not unreasonable to assume that many of his days have been made that way.

These are men who have fulfilled their boyhood dreams of glory. They became campus football heroes. For the rest of us, the dreams are enough. The child running through crowded streets, dodging parked cars and old women with shopping bags, is living his own fantasy. The undergraduate cheering his team to victory is living his. The old grad at the campus reunion has his. It is all part of Autumn Fever, this hot flash of remembrance and excitement.

Hear now the band, marching across campus on the morning of the game. At first, we hear only the drums, pounding out time for the marchers. Then, at the approach to the stadium, the horns sound and the band is in full swing, blaring out the fight song. We walk on shaded paths alongside silvery streams in the wake of the music. The car is parked miles away, and the walk to the stadium will be long, but we don't care, for there is a quickness in our step that was not there the day before. In a few minutes, we will see old friends at the annual big game party. We will eat and drink with them, recalling stories, most of them apocryphal, of dear dead times. The crowds in the street swell. The air fairly hums with excitement. The students watch us with wry amusement, not realizing that in time they will be among us, the next generation of old grads.

It is time now to head for the stadium. We set aside our food and drink and walk the last mile to the gates through crowds so thick they seem to merge into one multi-limbed giant. The noise from inside the stadium reaches us before we can get inside. What are they cheering in these minutes before the kickoff? They are cheering, in a way, themselves. They are cheering their own good fortune at being a part of something so basically joyful. The lame antics of the school mascot seem as hilarious as anything seen on stage or screen. The band might as well be Benny Goodman's in its prime. This is a happy time, above all, and as we mount the stairway, we can see through the opening in the tunnel a rolling sea of faces. And now we are a part of all this, sharing in the wonder and delight.

Autumn Fever. It hits us every year. It keeps us forever young.

one of their seasons came to an end in Philadelphia last March, but please pardon the Big Eight Conference coaches if they puff out their chests and brag a bit.

For them, 1981 was a very good year, a year when they undoubtedly were tempted to utter a few I-told-you-sos; a year the nation realized the Big Eight does more with a ball than kick it or pass it; a year of firsts.

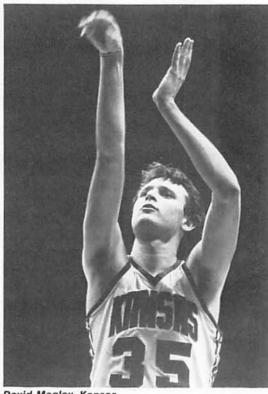

Never before had three Big Eight teams (Missouri, Kansas State and Kansas) appeared in the NCAA tournament. Never before had three teams (those same three) won at least 20 games in the same season. Never before had two teams (KU and K-State) advanced to the NCAA Regionals (final 16) in the same year.

Yes, it was a very good year. The 1981-82 season could be even better.

That's a pretty heady statement considering the fact that such dominating players as Rolando Blackman, Darnell Valentine, Andre Smith, JoJo Hunter and Curtis Berry have been graduated. But check who's back: Missouri returns five of its top seven, as well as redshirt Mark Dressler; K-State has four starters back and an exciting freshman class; Oklahoma State returns all five starters from a team which led the conference midway through the conference season; and so on. Only Kansas and Colorado lost as many as three starters.

The coaches are so excited about the upcoming year that they dusted off an old function, a pre-season Tipoff Luncheon, to boost their product. But that bash isn't really necessary. Their teams spoke eloquently enough on the court

Perhaps the story is apocryphal, but they say the Statue of Liberty, probably the first of football's "trick" plays, came about quite by accident. It was late in practice and one of the halfbacks was feeling particularly frisky and looking for a release from the boredom of running the same play over and over and over. His assignment was to go in motion towards one sideline, serving as a decoy. The quarterback would drop back and throw a pass to the other side of the field, away from the decoying halfback. But after the 27th run-through, the halfback suddenly wheeled back, ran behind the quarterback and, just as the QB cocked his arm to throw, the halfback plucked the ball out of his stunned grasp. The defense, retreating into pass coverage, was caught off balance and before it could recover, the halfback had strolled down the sidelines to the end zone.

Hmmmm, the coach mused. Let's try that again. We just might have something here. Thus was born the Statue of Liberty and thus was launched the first in a long, deceiving line of oddball plays.

"Well, that does make for a good story," agreed one college coach, "and that might really be the way it happened. But I'd prefer to think that somebody designed it on purpose. I don't know that anyone really is sure who first invented the Statue of Liberty or the Flea Flicker or the Muddle Huddle or the Swinging Gate or any of those kinds of plays.

"Heck, I thought I'd come up with a beaut myself and then one of my assistants, a guy who's been around football for going on 50 years, he said he saw the same thing diagrammed on the back of a cereal box back when he was a kid."

The geneology of football's oddity plays is uncertain. Modern coaches will suggest they were originated by some famous names out of the coaching past, tintypes in our memories. John Heisman perhaps, or Tiny Maxwell, for whom trophies are named. Or maybe it was Amos Alonzo Stagg, and that's how he won all those games. Could have been Pop Warner. And surely Knute Rockne figured in there someplace.

"I heard," said one coach, "That Rockne invented the Statue of Liberty. And that he did it right around the time George Gipp was playing for him. But that sounds too corny, like something out of a movie. I guess who did it first isn't really important. The important thing is those kinds of plays give us something to tinker around with. Hey, you've got to remember that you scratch a football coach and underneath you'll find a doodler, an inventor. We're always drawing X's and O's, on table cloths, laundry lists, cocktail napkins. Every one of us is still looking for the one big play nobody ever thought up before.'

There does seem to be a consensus about at least one trick play, the Flea Flicker. Historians generally credit it to Bob Zuppke, the coach at the University of Illinois more than half a century ago, the same man who recruited a kid from Wheaton, Ill., named Harold Grange, gave him uniform No. 77 and pointed him toward a broken field. All that was left then was the kid's shock of red hair, some long, weaving touchdown runs and a smitten sportswriter rhapsodizing over his typewriter about the Galloping Ghost.

But before that, Zuppke showed up at practice one day, gathered the team around, and introduced a new play. The quarterback would pass to the end, who would go down about 10 yards and buttonhook back toward the ball. After catching it, he would lateral off to a trailing halfback, who would gather it in full stride and streak away. And the name of the play? Simple. "When you catch that ball," Zup lectured his end, "you get rid of it quick. Timing is everything on this play. You catch it and you throw it to the back. Right now! Get rid of it like a dog flickin' a flea." Of course. The Flea Flicker.

There is another version, one which suggests that, like many strokes of genius, this one was a happy accident, that Bob Zuppke didn't set out intentionally to invent the Flea Flicker but was alert enough to capitalize on the idea when it presented itself, à la Isaac Newton being conked awake under that apple tree and coming up with the law of gravity. This story says that the same Illini end went out for a short pass, but the ball was thrown behind him. Turning 180° in mid-stride, the end made a remarkable catch, but in so doing lost his balance, got his feet tangled up and tripped over himself. As he was falling, he looked around desperately and saw a halfback, who had begun to move on down the field to block. Falling, the end pitched the ball to the surprised back, who caught it and sped, untouched, for a score.

"Let's try that one again," Zup is supposed to have instructed, the light bulbs now glowing in his head, "but this time don't fall down but flick the ball to him just like you did. And this time, we'll do it on purpose."

Speculating on their origins is part of the charm of the Flea Flicker and other football oddities. But tracing their roots is a virtual impossibility, and maybe if we knew how they actually came about part of their allure would be lost.

"Like the man says," agrees one coach, "don't try to explain it, just enjoy it. I know I sure do. I think there's a definite place in the game for those types of plays, for the fans certainly, for the players and for us coaches, too. Sometimes we get so caught up in the business itself that we lose sight of the fact that the whole idea of this thing in the first place was to have some fun.

"If the team I'm playing beats me with a trick play, say the center leaves the ball on the ground and an end comes around and picks it up and takes off while everyone else is going the other way, not knowing where the ball is, I'm going to be upset, sure. But when I have some time to think about it, after I watch the films, there comes a point where I'll have to admit we just plain got suckered, and I'll have to admire the other coach for having the guts to try something daring. And I'll let you in on something else...we'll put in a trick play ourselves and one of these days we'll pull it out and use it on him."

The value of a Flea Flicker? Crowd appeal, obviously. Nothing will bring a stadium full of shrieking fanatics lurching to their feet quicker than a variation of the old Swinging Gate or some other trick play brought out of the mothballs, souped up, re-tooled and then sprung at an opportune time.

But the values extend beyond mere entertainment.

"A Flea Flicker, something like that, can be a real tactical weapon," concurs one coach. "Obviously, there's the element of surprise. There are limits, of course. You can't use it over and over, and a whole game plan of nothing but trick plays won't win you anything. You've still got to play it straight, use it in emergency situations, use it sparingly. I guess the important thing is to know when to use it, and that gets to be instinct, a feeling you get as you sense the flow of the game. I guess it's like a spitball pitcher knowing when to load one

"A trick play can be great for swinging around the momentum. If the other guy is stopping everything you run, you might as well gamble. When it works, boy, it's like your team got a big dose of adrenaline. By the same token, if everything's riding on it and it backfires, you might as well fold your tents and go home. I remember one week we worked on a trick play off the kickoff. Our receiver would take the ball and then pass it, clear across the field to the other sideline, to another receiver. It worked great in practice. Then in the game, one of their guys made a mistake in coverage. He filled the wrong lane and ended up where he wasn't supposed to be. You know what happened? Our guy threw the ball, without even looking, and their guy, who was out of position, intercepted. He had to take maybe three steps and he was in our end zone. Talk about getting your bubble busted. We never did recover from that. Needless to say, we got creamed that day. But it didn't make me gun-shy. I'm still a believer. We won a game two years ago using the Swinging Gate and getting a two-point conversion. The final score was 15-14. And over the years, our charts show the Flea Flicker has averaged 23.7 vards each time we've used it.

Another coach sees a distinctly separate advantage to football's oddball plays, that of being monotony-breakers.

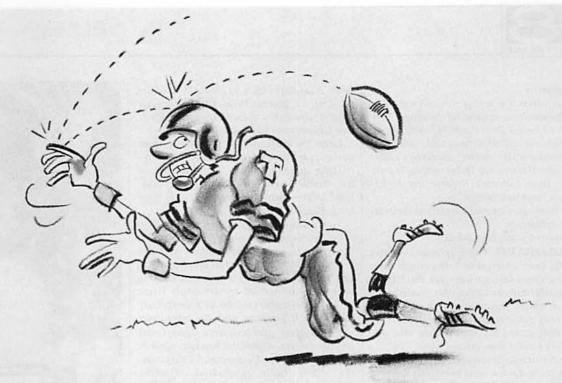

"We sometimes forget our players are humans, not robots, and they get tired and bored in practice," he explained. "You go through your whole repertoire and pretty soon they're mentally yawning. So I make it a habit to try and spice things up. Three or four times each season I'll give them some sort of weird play. Just a little something to break the routine. And we'll run it during a game, IF the time is right."

There is at least one college coach who goes even further, who embraces the Flea Flicker and other oddities with glee.

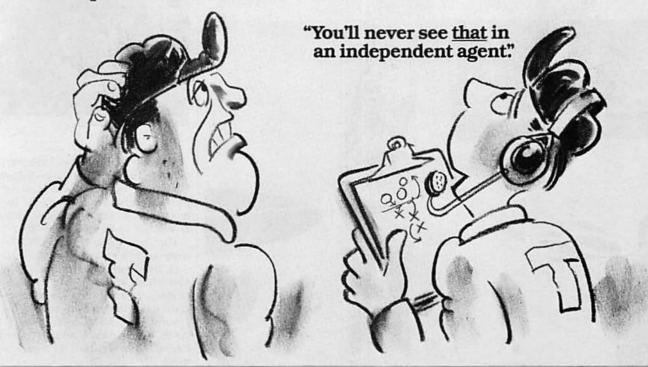

"I've been coaching for 30 years now," he says, "and I'm about convinced that since we've been playing this game for better than a century there isn't anything really new. Oh, you may make some modifications here and there, but when we think we've hit on something really revolutionary, all we actually did was re-discover the wheel. So I invite my players to dream up their own plays. It keeps their interest up. You should see some of them. Whew, we're talking wild!

"But you know, every once in a while they'll come up with one that works. I figure we ought to be encouraging them to think on their own. Isn't that what education's all about? Besides," he adds, with a wink, "if one of them schemes up some play that really works, the people in the stands are going to think I belong in the Hall of Fame."

"Snerdley appears to be a step or two behind in the pursuit of excellence."

They're on the ball. They're the very independent men and women who don't really work for Fireman's Fund or any other insurance company. They pick and choose from all the companies they represent. Sometimes they pick Fireman's Fund. Sometimes they don't. But whoever they choose, they do it for just one reason: To provide you the very best insurance for the very best price. If it happens to be ours, that's even better.

And when the teams weren't expressing themselves, opposing coaches, like Texas-El Paso's Don Haskins, were. After his team struggled to beat Colorado in a non-conference game, Haskins commented, "If there are three or four teams better than Colorado in the Big Eight, that's a heckuva league."

By the way, Colorado finished sixth in the conference.

A team-by-team preview:

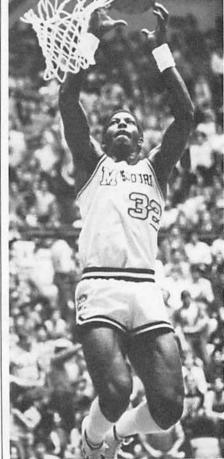

COLORADO The cupboard wasn't exactly bare when new head coach Tom Apke arrived last spring, but the highly successful former Creighton coach does face a major rebuilding task this year. The only returning starters Apke greets are soph guard Jay Humphries and oftinjured senior forward Jacques Tuz.

Humphries, however, possesses all the tools to be the next premier guard in a conference traditionally loaded with backcourt players. The 6-3 California product started 19 games and led the Buffs in assists (99) and steals (41), while scoring 6.4 points. With Hunter graduated, Humphries should be more effective his second time around.

Little Joe Washington, a starter in nine games, provides experience at the playmaking guard position, but the rest of the Buffs' backcourt is relatively untested. The candidates are Curtis Rayford, Russell Tearney.

Tuz, escaping leg injuries for the first time, averaged eight points a game (third best on the team) last season, and the 6-7 senior is being counted on to provide the bulk of Colorado's inside scoring this year. He'll be joined by 6-7 soph Vince Kelley, who came on late as a freshman, averaging 6.3 points and 3.4 rebounds.

The biggest problem area Apke must solve is center, where the top two players from 1980-81, Joe Cooper and Craig Austin, have both graduated. Freddie Bryant, a 6-10 soph who appeared in only six games last year, is the big hope in the middle.

Ricky Frazier, Missouri

IOWA STATE Johnny Orr's introduction to the Big Eight was forgettable. "This was my worst season as far as a won-lost record is concerned," he muttered after a 9-18 campaign, "and as far as injuries were concerned, too."

The two biggest (literally) injuries were to Orr's centers, Ron Falenschek, a 6-11,235-pound giant, and 6-6 John Kunnert. Both were playing their best ball of the year when they went down. The good news is that both will be back.

So will leading scorer Robert Estes (14.9), a 6-6 forward, and 6-3 guard Ron Harris, who averaged 13.7 points as a frosh.

While Falenschek, Estes and Harris appear to have starting spots locked up, Orr expects a battle royale for the other two spots. He recruited seven players, and there are five other returning lettermen.

Best of the newcomers appears to be 5-11 Paul Beene, who could step in immediately at point guard, and 6-5 Harry Stevens, who'll fight Kunnert (4.7) and Derrick Thomas (1.9) for the forward spot opposite Estes.

am a linebacker for a big school.
Looking in a mirror, I see a ruggedly handsome, glinty-eyed, courageous and yes, maybe even an intelligent face.

Of course, that's not the way others see me. My mother thinks I'm gorgeous but some of my teammates call me Plus Ugly—not meaning my face, necessarily, but the way my attitude changes when we go out on defense. I guess I can get pretty mean out there.

Who, and what, am I? I'd hate to believe I'm the vicious kind, but that's what psychiatrist Arnold Mandell called a linebacker prototype. I keep a clipping of Mandell's profiles of football players by positions, and every so often I look at that clipping and tell this shrink he's crazy, but other times I'm not so sure. This is how he characterized linebackers:

"They are analytical, intelligent and highly controlled. Linebackers are the ones who would make excellent assassins. They are smooth enough to get behind enemy lines and they don't hesitate when it comes time to pull the trigger."

Maybe he's right. I do listen to my coaches when they tell me to get in there and knock 'em down. But linebacking is more than just following the ball and tackling. I have to agree with the statement "A linebacker has the most important job on the team. It is the universal position" because it encompasses everything-tackling, blocking, running in all directions, catching the football, even throwing a lateral on occasion. In football some guys never get to touch the ball. The quarterback never has to catch it. The running back never makes a tackle and-think of this-he never runs backward.

You'll get an argument among line-backers about the relative importance of their positions. The outside people say the MLB is the easiest—he's in the middle and usually moves straight ahead or straight back. In our terms, he has "nowhere to go." But he's usually the one who calls the set plays, either on his own or on signal from the sideline, and he's got to be a forceful, leader type. He has to convince his fellow linebackers he believes that particular set will work.

The OLBs have problems. They face bigger linemen and that often means a test of strength. Don't believe that myth about "the bigger they are the harder they fall." In football today, with weight and strength work, size means power. So, one OLB is always responsible for the tight end, who is usually mobile as well as big. Additionally, all pass drops go toward the OLBs. If the play is wide or deep, they are very vulnerable; and if it's in close, they must make sure to plug any quick-developing holes up front.

Immediate recognition-reading is the guts of a linebacker's job. He must know, and act, within a fraction of a second. You might compare his reaction time to a third baseman's in baseball; he's in a do-or-don't situation requiring a decision right now ... no time to hesitate. That's where I've got to be analytical and highly controlled. And yet, any football player must be prepared to sacrifice his body for the next man; I've had the pleasure of taking out two blockers and forcing a play inside, so that the safety or another LB can make the tackle. He got the credit but I got the satisfaction. In football, satisfaction may be all the reward you'll get, except maybe a nod of approval from an assistant coach. The newspaper guys won't see how you stripped the interference, and the T.V. camera was pointed toward the ball-

Ever alert, the linebacker looks for subtle clues that will reveal the next play.

Are you beginning to agree that linebacking is the guts of defense and can get very complicated? I'm not going to open a whole playbook but maybe you'd like to learn a few of the lessons coaches drum into our heads hour after hour.

However, first let's talk about tricks . . . things not in the playbook. An old-timer taught me about mannerisms: to watch carefully how those within your responsibility—the tight end, for instance—come out of the huddle." It's human nature," he said. "Only a strong-willed person will not indicate in some manner which way the play is going."

I argued for a bit. Way back when he played they were using the diamond defense, with only one linebacker who was free to run all over the field looking for the ball. There were no face masks on helmets, so it was easier to read eyes. And it was easier to read the total offense because in those simpler days it was considered a sin to pass on first or even second down.

Nevertheless, I've discovered that he was essentially correct. It's still a game played by fallible human beings, a game of put and take, yield and recover. You're always looking for their mistakes, and they for yours. Little quirks are detectable. Maybe the quarterback will chew his fingernails, but only before a pass. Sometimes a player will hitch up his pants if it's his turn to get the ball. I look at the veins on the tight end's hands; when they're popping there's a good chance he's going to be the big man next down. Sometimes a running back will sneak a quick glance at the hole he's going to hit. Notice, for example, how the guard looks off the line to anticipate a pass block.

They'll try to fake you out, too. It's like boxing, where a feint here or a false look there can leave you hanging. Tight ends have a funny habit of making a halfhearted block, then suddenly jumping up to catch a short pass. It's a physical struggle all the time but it's a psychological one, too. I'm always searching for a clue while trying to hide my intentions.

It may surprise you to learn that most defensive playbooks are fatter than the offense's. We have to learn terminology for their movements as well as our own. Here's another surprise. We're called inside or outside linebackers, but more than half the time we're right up there on the line or we're stacking to one side or the other to align, or interchange, with the other LBs. Whether our standard set is 3-4 or 4-3, we'll be identifiable only by our jersey numbers when we are plugging a gap or quickly moving out.

Basically, though, it goes like this: an ILB meets the guard or guards head on; a weakside OLB will often key on the halfback if it's a running play and go right at him, but if he reads pass then he swings wide; the strongside OLB usually keys on the tight end and closes in on him if he blocks down, but if that tight end decides to go out, immediately the OLB speeds out and operates like the weakside OLB would against the halfback. Through all of this, the LBs must be wary about being trapped, must try to shorten the gap between the tight end and their own defensive end, must attack with the inside shoulder and avoid being spun out of control-they must keep that outside shoulder free.

We do a lot of rotating and stunting, depending on the down and distance, attempting to disguise our intentions or, as we call it, "giving different looks." Suppose it's third and three in midfield, and we decide it's a basic running down; we might show a balanced row of line-backers, or we might load up toward the side where we think they're going. We'd move in closer, by a couple of yards, from the positions we took on another series when the offense had third and six, and we were five or six yards back thinking interception.

Linebackers have gap responsibilities, but those gaps keep changing. Some offenses remain basic, where the defensive keys always work, but you don't always stop the offense. Others show a myriad of offenses which become a selective problem for them as well as for us.

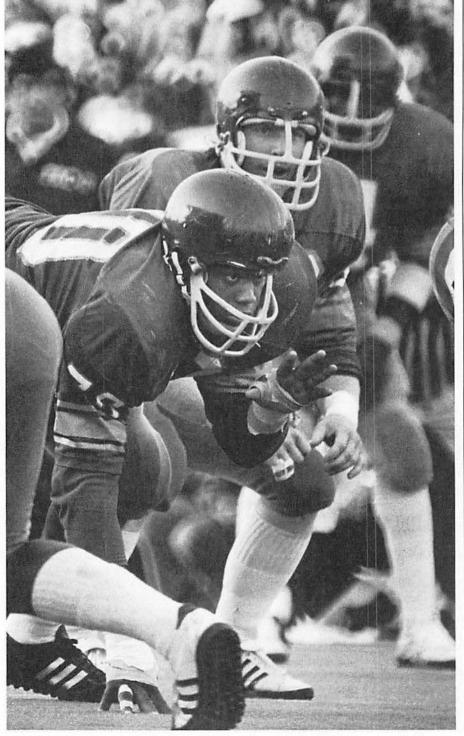

The field drills give an idea of the variety in our jobs. We have an angle drill in which we cross over again and again at 45 degrees, running in an area about the width between the hash marks as we advance (or retreat) all the way to the goal.

Then there is the line and turn—we shuffle backward but keep our heads turned forward, as it were. Try it some time, turning as hard as you can one way and looking back the other. Of course, there are the standards—the contact that starts from all fours, then the three point and finally the semi-karate stance. In each case, we want to uncoil and pop, or pop and uncoil, take your choice.

One of my favorites is to line up four tackling dummies at five-foot intervals and let a running back come through, choosing any hole he likes. We can guess or see where he's going and then, pop. (Or, if he fools us he's away.) I believe our drills require more versatility, more fire-power from different distances, than any other positions.

Defensive football is basic and primitive. Sometimes I feel like the king lion defending his territory. Beyond the basics, though, I'd like to leave you with this humble thought: we linebackers are fierce and smart.

Linebackers have the responsibility of plugging the gaps.

They will be officially inducted at the Foundation's 24th annual Awards Dinner, in December in New York City. Three former All-Americas were named to the Hall of Fame in the deceased player category; they will be officially inducted in special ceremonies at their home campuses this fall

VICTOR BOTTARI attended the University of California at Berkeley from 1936 - 39 and was an outstanding half-back for the school's football team. The 5-9, 187-pound All-America led the Golden Bears to the national championship in 1937 and helped Cal to achieve a 23-2-1 record in three seasons of competition. Bottari, who set a school scoring record, captained the 1938 team and was voted the Player of the Game in the 1938 Rose Bowl. He is currently the president of his own brokerage firm in Oakland, California.

NICHOLAS DRAHOS played at tackle for Cornell University from 1938 - 40, winning All-America honors in '39. In addition to being an offensive and defensive standout, Nick was an excellent kicker. The big tackle (6-3, 212 pounds) booted a field goal which helped Cornell beat Ohio State in 1939, leading the Big

ROBERT LILLY was a 6-5, 250-pound All-America tackle for Texas Christian University from 1958-60. Lilly helped spark the Horned Frogs to 20 victories in three seasons and was voted the team's Most Valuable Player in his senior year. He went on to play outstanding pro ball with the Dallas Cowboys and was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1980. Lilly is now a beer distributor in Texas and does television commercials.

HUGH MCELHENNY, nicknamed "Hurryin" or "Hurricane" Hugh, had a threeyear football career at the University of Washington (1949-51) during which he set 16 school records. McElhenny earned second team All-Coast honors as a sophomore, and was a first team All-Coast pick as a junior and senior. In 1951 he was also a unanimous All-America choice. McElhenny later starred with the San Francisco 49ers, the Minnesota Vikings, the New York Giants and the Detroit Lions. In 1970 he was inducted into the NFL Hall of Fame and in '79 was elected to the Husky Hall of Fame. Mc-Elhenny currently holds the position of vice president of the Washington Transit Authority in Seattle.

THURMAN McGRAW was Colorado State University's star tackle from 1946-49. He is generally regarded as one of the top linemen ever to play football in the Rocky Mountain area. "Fum" was an All-America player in 1948 and '49 and was also named an All-Mountain States Conference pick both those years. He went on to play with the Detroit Lions and was named Rookie of the Year, and later won All-Pro honors. McGraw returned to his alma mater to become the athletic director, a post he still holds.

GEORGE MORRIS played at center for Georgia Tech University from 1950 through 1952. The 6-3, 218-pound player has been called by his coach, Bobby Dodd, the "greatest football player I ever coached" (Dodd coached 22 All-Americas). Morris was co-captain of the 1953 All-Star team in Chicago's College All-Star Game. Morris has been a SEC football official for many years and is a business executive in Atlanta, Georgia.

TOMMY NOBIS, linebacker and guard for the University of Texas from 1962-65, is the youngest player to be inducted into the College Football Hall of Fame. Nobis, who averaged nearly 20 tackles per game, was named a consensus All-America in 1964 and '65 and won the Outland Trophy his senior year. As a direct result of his blocking ability, Texas scored 14 touchdowns in 1965, especially between the 20-yard line and the goal line. Tommy played pro ball with the Atlanta Falcons after his graduation, and today is a member of the Falcons' front office staff. He was elected a member of the Texas Longhorn's Hall of Honor in 1976.

FRANCIS (HANK) LAURICELLA was a tailback and defensive safety from 1948 to 1951 for the University of Tennessee. He led the Volunteers to the national championship in his senior year, the year that he was a unanimous All-America selection and the Heisman Trophy runnerup. In his college football career Hank rushed for 1,463 yards and passed for 1,105 yards for 16 touchdowns. Lauricella owns his own real estate business in New Orleans and was recently elected to his fifth term in the Louisiana Legislature.

ROGER T. STAUBACH was the U.S. Naval Academy's Heisman Trophy winner in 1963. The quarterback played for Navy from 1962-64, breaking 28 school records and winning the Maxwell Trophy. He was also the first Middie to win the Thompson Trophy three times. The vear that he won the Heisman, Staubach was fourth in the nation in total offense with 1,892 yards. Staubach went on to star with the Dallas Cowboys for 11 years; he was the three-time NFL passing champ and Most Valuable Player in Super Bowl VI. He helped the Cowboys win two Super Bowl Championships. Staubach was a CBS-TV sports analyst in 1980 and is now a businessman in Texas.

GEORGE TALIAFERRO was an All-America halfback for Indiana University in 1945, '47 and '48. He led Indiana to the Big Ten title in 1945. During his senior vear, Taliaferro was named the Hoosiers' Most Valuable Player and was team captain. Taliaferro later played pro football with the Philadelphia Eagles and the Baltimore Colts. Today he is special assistant to the president of Indiana University and chairman of the Special Advisory Commission to the Big Ten Intercollegiate Athletic Conference.

ALVIN WISTERT is the third brother to be inducted into the CollegeFootball Hall of Fame, joining Francis and Albert Wistert. Alvin was a standout tackle for the University of Michigan from 1947-49, winning letters each of those years and being chosen an All-America in 1948 and '49. Wistert was older than most college football players when he won those honors-he was 32 years old when first named an All-America—having served six years in the Marine Corps in WWII before entering college. Alvin, nicknamed "The Ox," is also a member of the Helms Foundation Hall of Fame. He is currently probation officer for a Michigan Criminal Court.

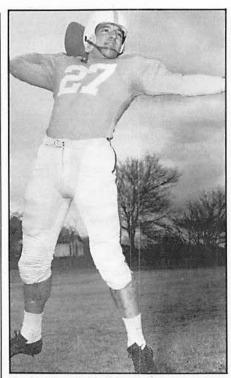

RALPH (MOON) BAKER played one year of football at Illinois, then transferred to Northwestern in 1924. The following year he spurred the formerly unimpressive Wildcats to a second place finish in the Big Ten, and in 1926 the team had an undefeated conference season, tying with Michigan for the Big Ten title. "Moon" was not only a great punter and an excellent dropkicker—he still shares the school record of seven field goals in a season—but was also a fine basketball player. The halfback earned

THE ESCAPE HATCH

Escape to where you long to be.

Here's the kind of engineering designed to take you miles away from the middle of the road. The 1982 Cavalier Hatchback. A brand-new car that owes its creation to innovation. Not imitation.

Escape with the goods.

Reclining front seats, power brakes, side and rear window defoggers and a remote hatch release (quite a remote feature on ordinary hatchbacks) combine with 38 other standard features to make the '82 Cavalier the most complete new car we've ever introduced.

On the technical side, innovations in front-wheel drive, aerodynamic design and operating efficiency help add up to 43 Est. Highway/26 EPA Est. MPG. * And engine buffs will be interested to know Cavalier's standard 1.8 Liter, 4-cylinder engine actually delivers more horsepower per liter than some highly regarded V8s.

Plan your escape now.

Your Chevy dealer can help put your escape plan in motion, starting with a test drive. Get inside. Drive it around the block. Then all that's left to do is to decide whether you want to buy or lease a new 1982 Cavalier. Whichever you choose, one thing's for sure:

You won't have any trouble at all adjusting to your new freedom.

*Use estimated MPG for comparisons. Your mileage may differ depending on speed, distance, weather. Actual highway mileage lower. Chevrolets are equipped with GM-built engines produced by various divisions. See your dealer for details.

The simple pleasures of driving a Honda Prelude. Starting from the top.

We think you'll agree, it's a real pleasure to look at.

But our sportiest Honda also sports the kind of features that make it a thrill to drive.

THE POWER-OPERATED MOONROOF. FOR OPENERS, IT'S STANDARD.

At the push of a button, the tinted-glass moonroof slides back. At the same time, an automatic deflector helps keep the wind out.

When you're behind the wheel, you'll be pleased at what you see in front of it. This year, the instrument panel houses a separate tachometer and speedometer, a quartz digital clock, a maintenance reminder and an electronic warning system.

Of course, the Prelude is just as much of a pleasure to sit in.

Its luxurious interior features comfortable bucket seats and adjustable headrests.

SOME SIMPLE ENGINEERING FACTS.

Our sportiest car has frontwheel drive, four-wheel independent suspension, rack and pinion steering and a responsive 1751cc CVCC* engine. The fact is, the Honda Prelude is designed to give you years of good performance. POWER STEERING COMES AUTOMATICALLY WITH THE AUTOMATIC TRANSMISSION.

The 5-speed stick shift is standard. But with the optional automatic 3-speed, you also get variable-assist power steering.

And after you've weighed all your options, we hope you drive off in the Honda Prelude.

We make it simple.

The new Mazda RX-7. Just one look and you'll see its incredible value versus Porsche 924 or Datsun 280ZX.

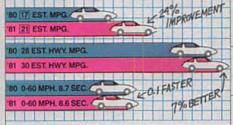

Think for a moment of all you expect in a fine sports car. Then compare your expectations with all you get in the new Mazda RX-7.

The sleek style you expect is all there. Including many new exterior refinements. The look is clean and functional. In fact, the RX-7's aerodynamics have never been better. Inside, there's a new instrument cluster and more-convenient gear-shift lever.

The performance you expect is also there. 0 to 60 happens in a quick 8.6 seconds. Handling is superb, too. The compact rotary engine is placed behind the front axle, for ideal weight distribution.

You expect good mileage. Instead, the front, mid-engine RX-7 offers great mileage. 24% better than last year.

Of course, you also expect a lot of features. And our long list won't disappoint you in the least.

The new RX-7 does, however, come with one thing most people don't expect. A price that makes it an absolutely astonishing value. The RX-7 GS comes with all this. And more.

• 2-speaker AM/FM stereo radio • Power antenna • 5speed overdrive transmission

 Steel-belted radials • Dual remote-control sideview mirrors

 Halogen headlights • Front and rear stabilizer bars • Analogue quartz clock • Tachometer

he Lombardi Award, now in its twelfth year, is named for coaching legend Vince Lombardi and is the only such award officially authorized by his widow, Marie. It is bestowed annually upon the college football lineman, offensive or defensive, who singularly caps outstanding performance and ability with the one specific quality which personified Coach Lombardi. That quality was discipline—both self-discipline and discipline demanded of his players.

Four finalists are chosen each year by a committee consisting of 100 college coaches, sportswriters and sportscasters throughout the nation.

The award winner is selected in three steps. First, each committee member nominates four candidates, and the twelve players gaining the most votes become semi-finalists. Then, from these twelve, voters pick their top four choices and the four with the most votes become finalists. In the third and final step, the player with the most votes wins the coveted award.

When deliberating over the award nominees, each member of the selection committee must be assured of the player's exceptional performance on (and off) the field, his unyielding discipline and his steadfast desire to win through hard work and dedication.

Discipline is so much a part of the Lombardi Award curriculum that the word is inscribed on the award itself, created by artist Mark Storm in 1970. The actual trophy, fittingly a 40-pound block of granite mounted on a pedestal, represents Vince Lombardi, at 5-8, 185 pounds the smallest, but by no means the least, of the legendary Seven Blocks of Granite at Fordham University (1934-37) in the Bronx, New York.

Like Lombardi, who went on to join the ranks of professional football, coaching the Green Bay Packers to three consecutive National Football League championships and two Super Bowls, winners of the Lombardi Awards have enjoyed successful careers in the pros.

Over the past eleven years the award dinner, sponsored by the Rotary Club of Houston, has brought in nearly half a million dollars for the American Cancer Society. This money funds research to find a cure or control for cancer, the disease which took the life of the seemingly invincible Coach Lombardi on September 3, 1970.

Since 1971 thirty-seven outstanding college lineman have been honored as finalists at the annual Lombardi Award dinner, and 10 of those athletes have been chosen to receive the Trophy.

The first winner was Jim Stillwagon, a 6-0, 220-pound defensive guard and linebacker from Ohio State. The finalists that year were Larry DiNardo, Notre Dame; Chip Kell, Tennessee; and Rock Perdoni, Georgia Tech.

Each January the tradition—now well-established—of honoring the ability and discipline of one college lineman with the Lombardi Trophy continues. The Award is a great tribute to Vince Lombardi, helping to honor and perpetuate those qualities of college football players in which he deeply believed.

It was an outstanding blocker named Russ McNeil who was singled out by Kazmaier when the great running back won the Heisman Trophy in 1951.

The role of the fullback has probably changed more during the history of college football than any of the other positions.

Now, a different breed of athlete fills the role. Sure, he must be able to get the first down in key situations, but he must also bring many other talents to the party. He must be able to catch the ball, he must be able to read defenses, and he must have the speed of the old-fashioned tailback. Oh, yes, the fullback also must be able to block.

"There has been a drastic change in the role of the fullback," a well-known Big Ten coach said. "We once had big, strong fullbacks, but now the fullbacks are of tailback size with good speed and pass-catching ability. We have gone from fullbacks who weigh 235 pounds to some well under 200 pounds. Blocking, though, is still important."

"You have to take into consideration the offenses," said a Big Eight coach. "In some types of attack, he is used primarily as a blocker. Some coaches using offenses like the veer or pro set prefer to have their ballcarriers be 'running backs' rather than the halfback or fullback.

"I like to use the fullback in every way. Because of the wishbone offense every play usually begins with the fullback, either as a ballcarrier or as a faker. In the triple option, the quarterback makes his first move to the fullback. If he fakes to the fullback, he then carries out one of the remaining two options, a keep or a pitch to the tailback.

"Our thinking on what type of individual makes a good fullback has changed throughout the years. When we began using the wishbone, we used a big, powerful back at that spot. However, we now think the smaller, but much quicker, individual makes a better fullback because of the thrust to break a long run each time he runs with the ball. We think this type of fullback freezes the defense better because of that threat. The power back is no real threat to go all the way."

One of the top coaches in the East says the fullback today is one of the best all-around players on the team.

"Fullbacks have to be good blockers, especially if they play in an I offense," he said. "They have to be good pass receivers and have the speed of the tailback. But they also have to have some bulk to get the extra yard. To me, the biggest difference is in the physical makeup of the fullback."

The bottom line, then, is that today's fullback must be a much better athlete than the old-time fullback.

Right?

Wrong.

One of the best fullbacks in the history of the game was Bronko Nagurski, the University of Minnesota All-America. He was one of the most punishing runners in the late 1920s. He was quick and strong and an excellent blocker.

And no one will ever question the total athletic abilities of Syracuse's Jim Brown and Ernie Nevers of Stanford.

An extensive study of the changing role of the fullback shows that even in the "dark ages" he was more than a three - yards - and - a - cloud - of - dust performer.

and still be used outside.

What this all leads to is that fullbacks really have to have speed now. Brute strength is not enough. Teams that do not have fullbacks with speed are probably playing with halfbacks that do not have speed.

go outside. Sometimes he can be moved over in the split position of the backfield

If a team were looking for the perfect fullback, he would be an athlete who could run inside, outside and up the middle. He would also be the best blocker in the backfield and an outstanding pass catcher.

Nagurski and Nevers were two of the greatest fullbacks and one important point should be mentioned about them. In their era, the players performed both on offense and defense.

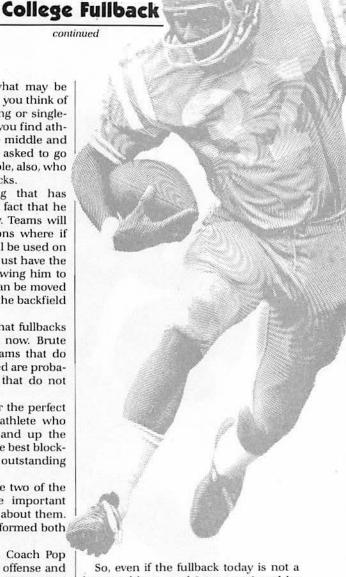

At Stanford, with Nevers, Coach Pop Warner used a double-wing offense and had his backfield doing many, many things. Nevers would be spinning, going crazy up the middle or sliding to either side.

Basically, though, I think that for a lot of years football coaches took their third best back and made him the fullback. The best was usually the left halfback, the second best the right halfback, etc.

Probably the major change in the full-back's role was brought about by the introduction of so many new offenses, plus the exclusive return in 1965 to two-platoon football. Remember, prior to 1945 two-platoon football was virtually unknown. Then, between 1945 and 1953 it was used. But in 1953 the NCAA Rules Committee returned to single-platoon football and players had to perform on both offense and defense until the coaches screamed so loudly that the present rules were adopted in 1965.

When coaches were trying to find fullbacks during the single-platoon era, they had to also find an athlete who was capable on defense. In many instances, the fullback became the middle linebacker on defense.

Now, they do not have to worry about that.

So, even if the fullback today is not a better athlete—and I am convinced he is—he certainly does not have to worry about something other than offense.

But, in the end, the offense dictates the type of fullback.

If you're operating from an I formation, with runners like O. J. Simpson or Charles White who carry the ball 75 percent of the time and catch the ball another 10 to 15 percent of the time, the fullback is basically a blocker.

But if you're using two wide sets, where you split the backfield, it's an entirely different concept. He has to be able to go inside, up the middle and outside, and be able to catch the football.

So, the role of the fullback has changed.

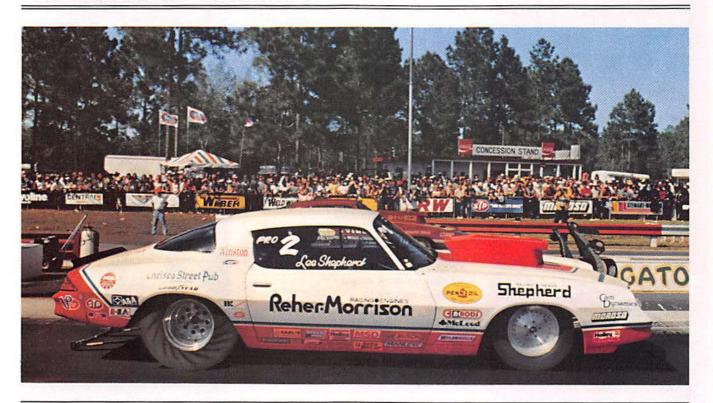

For the most part, he is a well-known athlete now, not an obscure blocker.

Overall, he must be faster and quicker than he was 30 years ago, able to catch the football and able to block. And when he's not doing that, he should be able to read the defenses.

And if you know where to find a large quantity of athletes with these abilities, just about every college coach in America would like to know about them.

TAILGATING PARTIES

he college football season is different things to different people—crisp, invigorating autumn days; the excitement of the big play; cheering your team on to victory, whether you're an alumni, a current student, or just love college ball; listening to the bands play and the cheerleaders cheer; and great tailgate parties.

Those pre-game get-togethers called tailgating picnics have become part of the college football tradition—lots of people look forward to tailgating nearly as much as they do the game. And barbequing is now considered an essential ingredient for a good tailgate party.

The recipes below, provided by Charmglow, are just two of the many delicious dishes that can turn your tailgating barbeque into a feast. Either of these can be served with a big green salad and grilled vegetables.

WHY TEAMS WIN IN THE FOURTH QUARTER

by Gus Schrader, Cedar Rapids GAZETTE hen one college football team rises up with a monumental rally to beat another team in the fourth quarter, who deserves the hero's mantle? Who gets the goat's horns?

What's the biggest factor in such game turn-arounds? Does one side have better squad conditioning? Greater depth of personnel? Coaching strategy? Tradition? Officiating breaks? Some incident that changes momentum? Just plain luck?

Whatever the reasons behind this sort of win, football reputations are made and damaged in those final minutes.

The members of the College Sports Information Directors of America probably are best qualified to chronicle how games are won in the final period with superb rallies. Bet you didn't know the members of this illustrious group even have an "association within an association" that emphasizes how important bowl games are won or lost in the fourth quarter.

It's called "The National Order of the Golden Mousetrap." It was started by a group of CoSIDA members when they looked around and discovered misery really does love company.

"It was after our Nebraska team had played Arkansas in the Cotton Bowl after the 1965 season," recalls Don "The Fat Fox" Bryant, Cornhusker sports information director. "We took a 7-3 lead into the fourth quarter and got beat 10-7. Like all of our people, I suffered some heartbreak, but soon I began to notice other teams were losing in similar fashion in bowl games almost every year.

"My good friend, Jay Simon, was sports information director at Kansas then, and I was commiserating with him after Kansas got beat by Penn State 15-14 after leading 14-7 going into the fourth quarter of the Orange Bowl (1969 season).

"So some of us got to chinning about this at the next CoSIDA meeting, and soon we made a list of teams that lost bowl games like that. We've had a lot of fun with it through the years. Only members of CoSIDA are eligible, and the requirements are these:

"1. The team must play in a postseason game; 2. lead in the fourth quarter; 3. get mousetrapped in the fourth quarter and lose. We even have our own motto, and it's a good one: 'It's better to have been mousetrapped in a bowl game than never to have gone at all!"

The group discovered many drumbeaters who were eligible. Ted Mann was named "chairman of the board emeritus" because his Duke team led USC 3-0 in the Rose Bowl (1938 season), but lost 7-3. Wilbur Evans was elected "president emeritus" because he recalled his Texas team led Tennessee 14-13 in the Cotton Bowl (1951) and lost 20-14.

Other charter members were Bryant, Simon and Harold Keith, whose Oklahoma team took a 27-21 lead on SMU in the Bluebonnet Bowl (1968) and bowed 28-27. At last look there were 29 members, including Bryant and Alabama's Charley Thornton, each of whom had three such experiences.

Imagine that! You usually think of football powers WINNING bowl games with king-sized rallies, but even the great ones lose 'em once in a while. Some twice in a while.

So now we can agree that turnarounds do happen. But why?

A veteran coach from the South says a lot of the late-arriving victories were due to better conditioning in the old days. That was when teams played single-platoon and the players had to go both ways. Lots of fourth-quarter wins occurred because their opponents "got gassed" in the days of wooden ships and iron men.

Many coaches maintain that depth plays an important role in fourth quarter victories.

"But now almost every good college program has a weight coach and an offseason conditioning program," he points out. "What's more, in these days of specialists and free-sub rules, it's hard to say one team can out-condition another."

Others do maintain, however, that depth is still a factor in college, despite the free-sub rule. This often shows up in the fourth quarter when one team doesn't have adequate replacements for injured offensive linemen, or a sub safety can't keep up with a fleet pass receiver.

Coaching strategy? Don't get into this without expecting an argument. Indeed, you can always spot an inexperienced reporter at any post-season press conference. He is the one, not wanting to be scooped on any possible angle, who asks the losing coach, "Did they do anything that surprised you, Coach?" The answer is always the same: "Oh no! They just did a lot of things BETTER than we thought." No coach likes to admit he was outcoached.

Another popular press-conference question is: "Coach, what was the turning point of the game?"

Duffy Daugherty, when he was coaching at Michigan State, was rendered almost speechless—if that was possible for the loquacious Duffy—on one occasion. It was the 1960 game against Iowa —the final coaching season for Iowa's Forest Evashevski. The Hawkeyes had zipped off to a 14-0 lead in the first quarter, but Michigan State went ahead 15-14 with eight points in the third quarter and seven in the fourth.

Then one of those "just plain luck" incidents happened. Michigan State was running out the clock, less than three minutes to play on Iowa's 30-yard line. But someone knocked the ball loose on a simple Michigan State handoff into the line. Iowa's Joe Williams grabbed the ball in the air and thundered 67 yards for the winning touchdown.

The Michigan State dressing room was like a morgue. It got even worse when a student reporter asked Duffy, "Coach, what was the turning point of the game?" Duffy almost threw the poor kid out.

Change in momentum? O.K., try the Notre Dame—USC game of 1974. The Fighting Irish jumped off to a 24-0 lead and seemed headed for a victory of epic proportions. USC finally got untracked with a touchdown just before the half, 24-6, but that hardly prepared anyone for what happened in the second half. USC almost wore out its famous Trojan Horse—who dashes on the field after every score—by rolling up a 55-24 win.

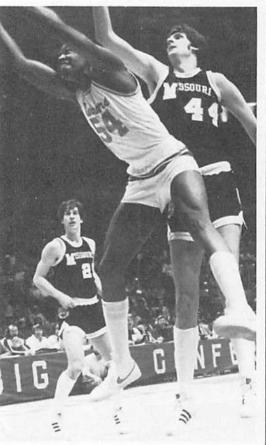

Heroes? Goats? College football has them by the dozens, and most of them seem to be born in the fourth quarter—late, when the burners are turned on.

KANSAS The losses to graduation were staggering, but don't write off the Jayhawks quite yet.

In 6-6 senior guard Tony Guy (15.8), coach Ted Owens has one of the conference's premier players, and if Owens can find: a) a point guard to replace Darnell Valentine; b) a way to make mammoth 6-9 center Victor Mitchell blend into the offense; and c) a good knee for Kelly Knight, the Jayhawk coach will once again have his team in contention.

The primary task is replacing Valentine, a four-time All-Big Eight selection. The candidates are freshman Tad Boyle, juco transfer Jackie Fluery and letterman Jeff Konek (1.9). And, if all else fails, Guy has proven he can run the team. He was second (behind Valentine) in steals and assists during KU's banner 24-8 season a year ago.

Mitchell was up and down as a junior, and the Jayhawks will need the 260-pounder to be up all the time this year. He started 23 games, averaging 8.1 points and 5.6 rebounds, but during tournament time, he was on the bench.

Knight, a 6-7 soph, could be the key. A power forward who can also play the middle, he was playing the best ball of his career last fall before a devastating knee injury ruined his season. If he returns strong, KU will have fine forwards. Senior David Magley comes off his best season (9.5 points and 5.5 rebounds), and junior Mark Summers is an experienced sub.

KANSAS STATE For the first time in five years, Big Eight teams won't have to worry about Rolando Blackman when they play the Wildcats. But there are a couple of other guys who have been around almost as long.

Ed Nealy and Tyrone Adams have started since they were freshmen. Now, in their final season, they make up the league's finest forward duo—Nealy the Big Eight's top rebounder; Adams the smooth, quick, small forward.

They're two of the main reasons K-State figures to make another run for the conference crown despite losing a great player like Blackman. A third reason is Randy Reed, a small, but effective, 6-7 center. Reed, the Big Eight's Newcomer of the Year, scored 12.1 points a game, just ahead of Adams' 11.5 and Nealy's 11.0.

With an estalished front line like that.

Coach Jack Harman is afforded the luxury of experimenting in the backcourt as he searches for someone to replace Blackman. Point guard Tim Jankovich (7.3) returns for his senior year, and 6-5 Eduardo Galvao (4.3) is also back, but both could be looking over their shoulders at highly regarded freshmen Lafayette Watkins (6-6) and Kenny Williams (6-4).

MISSOURI Almost overshadowed by the NCAA tourney success of Kansas and Kansas State was the fact Missouri won its second straight Big Eight regular season title, the first time a team outside the state of Kansas has ever done that. Don't be surprised if Norm Stewart's Tigers make it three in a row.

Gone are rugged forward Curtis Berry and point guard Shawn Teague, but everyone else is back ... and more. The more is 6-6 Mark Dressler, the super-sub of 1979-80 who missed all of last year because of a knee injury. He'll join first team All-Big Eight Ricky Frazier (16.3) as the bookends for 6-11 center Steve Stipanovich (12.7), a talented junior who has yet to attain the greatness everyone continued on 54t hey say football is a game of inches, and when you hear that you naturally think in terms of one-point or one-touchdown games," the veteran southern coach said. "But sometimes a three-touchdown game can be a game of an inch, too.

"We were pretty solid underdogs one day, and we kicked off, and sure enough the other team drove it right down to our goal line. But our guys held on first down and on second and on third. "It was important that the favored team establish what everybody had been reading in the papers, that they let us know who was boss. So they didn't go for the field goal. They ran wide on fourth down, and our little defensive back came up and dove at the runner and just got his hand on his shoe and tripped him about an inch from the goal line.

"That deflated the other team. It hurt their confidence. It made them wonder if they were really better than us. It jacked us up. It made us wonder if we weren't really better than they were.

"We took the ball and drove it all the way to a touchdown and won by three TDs. I really believe if they had scored down there on that first drive they would have beaten us by three touchdowns. The only thing that will turn a game around like a goal-line stand is a blocked punt."

It is a different game inside the 10, for the offense and the defense. That's where it's established who's boss. Scoring can be worth more than six points. Failing to score can cost more than six points.

"We have four or five special plays designed for use down there," a Pacific Coast coach said. "You have to remember that the defense is committed to penetrating. They're going to be charging, hoping they grab you at the line or be-

Stress can rob you of vitamins

What is stress?

Severe injury or infection, physical overwork, too many martini lunches, fad dieting—any condition that places an unusual demand upon your body constitutes stress and may cause B and C vitamin depletion, if the diet is inadequate.

Vitamins the body can't store.

Your body absorbs two kinds of vitamins from the food you eat: fat-soluble and water-soluble. Substantial reserves of the fat-soluble vitamins are accumulated in body tissues. But this is not true of most of the water-soluble vitamins, B-complex and C. They should be replaced every day.

When your vitamin needs are increased by stress, your body may use up more B and C vitamins than your usual diet can provide. When that stress is prolonged, a vitamin deficiency can develop.

STRESSTABS' 600 High Potency Stress Formula Vitamins can help.

STRESSTABS® 600 has a single purpose: to help you avoid a B-complex and C vitamin deficiency. With 600 mg of vitamin C, and B-complex vitamins, high potency STRESSTABS® 600 can help restore your daily supply of these important vitamins.

STRESSTABS® 600 also contains the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance of vitamin E.

A stress formula to meet a woman's need for iron.

STRESSTABS® 600 with Iron combines the basic STRESSTABS formula with 150% of the Recommended Daily Allowance of iron, plus folic acid and more B₆, to help satisfy the special nutritional needs of many young women.

STRESSTABS 600 with Zinc.

Because zinc requirements have also been found to increase during various forms of stress, it has recently been concluded that there are times when your body may need more zinc.

One of the most spectacular goal-line plays is the diving touchdown, where the back attempts to propel himself over the line.

hind it. I like to try to freeze the defense with a good fake.

"Twenty years ago the cardinal principle was that you ran straight ahead on offense when you were inside the 10. You didn't dare run laterally because that charging defense could drop you for a loss. But teams have gotten away from that. Now they'll run laterally and give themselves an option or two and put some heat on the defense."

"One play you never see anywhere but down close is that high pass in the corner of the end zone over the cornerback's head," said a successful small college coach from the West. "If I were on the five-yard line, and it was the last play of the game, and I had to score to win, I'd fake to a back and then throw that pass."

It's a matter of record that passing teams often compile impressive statistics that aren't matched by their wonlost records.

"One reason is their inability to perform when they get down close," a midwestern coach who swears by the run pointed out.

"Okay, they're out on midfield, and they've got half a field to work with. Their receivers can go anywhere and confound the defense.

"But all of a sudden they're inside the 10-yard line, and all those wide-open spaces are gone. Now the advantage has shifted to the defense. The receivers have a small area in which to work and often the result is an interception or the offense having to settle for a field goal, which can be discouraging when you need six points."

On the other hand, the wishbone formation, which is geared to the ground attack, is very effective inside the 10-yard line.

"We're running an attack that is supposed to produce three or four yards a crack," said a successful wishbone coach, "so when we get down close we're at home. We just keep on doing what we've been doing.

"We won one game by crossing up the defense by passing from the five-yard line after we had driven 75 yards without a pass. That took a lot of starch out of them.

"The next week, we got down close, and you could almost see the defense's eyes get wide, wondering if another pass was coming up. This time we ran it in."

It's a guessing game inside the 10-yard line. An outstanding defensive back was beaten two weeks in a row by the lob pass to a receiver running to the corner of the end zone. The next opponent had done its homework, and it came with that play when it got in the shadow of the goal posts. This time he didn't go for the fake, and he made an interception in the end zone that turned the game around.

The most spectacular goal-line play is the diving touchdown. The back, without regard for life or limb, takes the handoff and with the dexterity of a gymnast propels himself over the line, sometimes turning a flip and landing on his head or back—or even landing on his feet.

"We had a guy who perfected that play," an eastern coach said. "I've never seen anyone who could do it like he could. He'd be in the air and judge what the linebacker was going to do, and if the linebacker had him blocked he could actually roll off to the side and miss him. I've never seen anything like it.

"We practice that play. It's obviously one of the most important for offense and defense."

At the goal line, the defensive line hits low, and it's the job of the linebackers to plug those airy gaps and ground the flyers.

The quarterback who performs coolly in the spaciousness of midfield doesn't necessarily do so in the pressurized area inside the 10.

"I watched a quarterback who was okay until his team got down to where it could smell the goal line," a veteran sports writer said. "Then he seemed to tense up. The coaches must have closed their eyes and gritted their teeth when he took the snap. He fumbled a couple of times, and those fumbles probably cost his team both games."

On the other hand, some quarterbacks and other players perform best in the hot spot. "We had a guy who led the conference in scoring, and he must not have rushed for 300 yards," a southern coach recalled. "But he could smell that goal line. The defense knew he was going to get the ball when we got down there, but they couldn't do anything about it."

"I almost used to like to see the other team get down on our goal line," an All-America defensive lineman from the 1960s said. "I always believed we could stop them, and usually we did.

"That's what football is all about. You'd better believe it's a different game inside that 10."

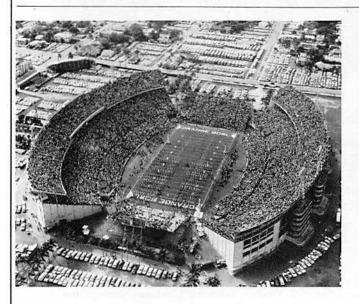

What separates the champions from everyone else is the ability to duplicate their achievements.

expected from him.

Busting into that lineup will be darn near impossible, but the Tigers think they've found a great one in 6-9 freshman Greg Cavener, who, along with soph Ron Jones (3.4) and Marvin McCrary, a 6-4 senior, figures to provide a solid bench.

In the backcourt, junior Jon Sundvold (13.8) is as good as there is in the conference, a fact people finally are beginning to realize. Sundvold was the Tigers' most consistent player last year, while helping to break in a new point guard. He may have to do that again this year.

NEBRASKA The big guy is gone. That's bad. The little guy is here. That's good.

The Huskers can't help but miss center Andre Smith, the conference player of the year, but his loss is tempered by the fact that 5-9 (yup, that's right) Jack Moore returns for his senior season. Moore, proving there's still a spot for a little man in the game, averaged 12.6 points a game and drove a lot of teams nuts with his ballhandling and free throw shooting in the closing minutes of games.

Moore could be even better this season, with hotshot J.C. transfer Handy Johnson on the scene at the other guard spot.

The Huskers should be set at forward, too, with three short, but experienced, players back, headed by Kenny Walton (8.3) and defensive specialist Ray Collins (7.1). Another capable hand is Greg Downing (4.7), who can also play outside.

Coach Moe Iba's biggest need, not surprisingly, is at center, where Smith hogged practically all the action the last three years. A top candidate is juco transfer Victor Chacon.

OKLAHOMA Sooner fans will need a program to keep track of Billy Tubbs' crew this year. Along with seven returning lettermen (including three starters), Tubbs has wheeled in seven recruits, four J.C. transfers and three high schoolers.

Tubbs went shopping hoping to get the Sooners turned around. He guided OU to a 9-18 mark last season in his initial year after coming from Lamar. Obviously, he wasn't satisfied.

Year No. 2 should be better, but how much will depend on the newcomers. The Sooners' backcourt looks solid with Chuck Barnett, the Big Eight's second leading scorer at 18.4, and steady Bo Overton (9.7). Both started every game last year, but one of them may have to sit down if Ray Whitely, the star of OU's championship team three years ago, is recovered from an Archilles tendon injury which sidelined him during '80-81.

Leroy Combs Oklahoma State

Other guards on hand are 6-3 frosh Shawn Clark and 6-1 juco transfer Jan Pannell.

Les Pace, a quick but short (6-7) center, returns for his senior year after a fine (10.2 points, 8.0 rebounds) junior campaign. At the forwards, returnees Larry Hendrix (6.0) and Randy Samuels (4.6) will be pushed by a trio of former J.C. players—6-7 Darrell Allen, 6-4 Don Gandy and 6-6 Calvin Pierce.

OKLAHOMA STATE It looks like a mistake. There on the Cowboys' roster, next to Lettermen Returning, is the number 12.

You read it right. A dozen lettermen are back from the team which stunned practically everyone in the Big Eight by finishing with an 18-9 record.

Among that list are all five starters, including Matt Clark (17.3), a 6-3 playanywhere junior who probably would have been player of the year if he hadn't been hurt halfway through the conference season.

Clark is listed as a guard, but he is most effective dealing from a high post, usually after taking a pass from Eddie Hannon (8.0), who averaged a conference-high 5.6 assists in Big Eight play.

The low post was manned quite nicely by Leroy Combs, third in the league in rebounding (8.2) and fifth in scoring (16.4). He will be flanked by senior Ricky Jacobs (10.3) and soph defensive whiz Raymond Crenshaw (5.0). Backups up front include Mark Connolly (2.6), Craig Stunkel (2.5) and Jon Phelps.

Pushing Clark and Hannon are Lorenza Andrews (4.7), Tracy Penn (3.3) and Dickey Nutt (3.8).

The major deficiency is lack of heighth—Combs and Crenshaw are the tallest starters at 6-7—but the fast-breakminded Pokes make up for it with quickness and, yes, depth.

Big Eight Conference — Service Comes First

What is the Big Eight Conference?

The oldest major-college conference composed solely of state universities, the members of this voluntary association are Iowa State, Kansas State, Oklahoma State, Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska and Oklahoma.

Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska were among the original five members of the group which organized in January of 1907 as the Missouri Valley Conference.

By 1925, membership was 10; however, at a meeting in Lincoln, Neb., on May 19, 1928, six of the seven state institutions — Oklahoma State was the exception — formally organized a separate conference — the Missouri Valley Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

This was the old "Big Six," although the longer, more formal name was official. Iowa State, Kansas State, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska and Oklahoma became the "Big Seven" on December 1, 1947, with the addition of Colorado. Oklahoma State rejoined its old mates on June 1, 1957.

The name "Big Eight Conference" was officially adopted in May, 1964.

Purposes

Basic purposes for creation of the association were, "To organize, control and supervise intercollegiate athletics," "To establish standards and promote scholarship and high ideals in sportsmanship," and "To formulate principles and disseminate information regarding the proper place of athletics in schools and colleges."

All members must have institutional control of athletics.

For discussion of Conference matters, each institution is represented by a faculty member (a person, appointed by the chief executive officer, who has professional rank and who is not primarily associated with athletics or physical education) and a director of athletics.

Carl James Commissioner

Keith Broman Chairman

Dan Gibbens Secretary

The faculty representatives constitute the legislative body of the Conference. The directors comprise the operating body or administrative agency, functioning under the rules and regulations enacted by the faculty representatives.

All official business relative to the operation of athletics is conducted by the directors.

To help achieve the purposes of the Conference and to carry out related administrative activities, the Conference maintains a headquarters office in Kansas City. A fulltime staff of nine is under the supervision of Commissioner Carl James.

The Commissioner is authorized, among other duties, to serve as treasurer of the Conference to administer receipts (mainly from television rights fees, bowl games, and meets and tournaments) and disbursements of Conference funds, to train and assign officials for football and basketball, to make rulings on or interpretations of Conference regulations, and to serve as the principal enforcement officer of the Conference.

In addition, the Big Eight:

 Determines champions in 11 sports for men and 10 for women, conducting championship events in all but football. In 1979, the Big Eight became the first major conference to include women's sports in its championship-events program.

- Maintains five standing committees to assist with governance.
- Publishes an annual "Records Book" with historical data. Pre-season sports outlooks are also published and distributed.
- Collects, compiles and distributes official statistics weekly during sports' seasons.
- Negotiates for television exposures on behalf of the membership.
- Provides education on rules governing college athletics including those covering eligibility, financial aid, practice and competition and recuiting.
- Regulates the eleven Conference sports, establishing guidelines for size of traveling squads, financial agreements, season limitations and schedules.
- Grants a "Post-Graduate Scholarship" annually, in the amount of $1,500 to provide continued education for a deserving Conference student-athlete.
- Selects an "Athlete-of-the-Year," the Conference's highest award based on both athletic achievement and personal citizenship.

Athletes Fare Well

In competition, the Conference boasts an impressive record of success. For example, Big Eight representatives finished among the NCAA top ten in nine of eleven sports during the 1980-81 season. Other Big Eight highlights:

- At least two teams have finished in wire services football "Top Ten" lists every year since 1970.
- Two basketball teams reached NCAA "Final Sixteen" in 1981.
- Big Eight teams have won the past five NCAA gymnastics championships.
- Big Eight teams have won 18 of the past 25 NCAA wrestling championships.
- Big Eight teams have been to the finals of the college baseball "World Series" nine times, more than those of any conference except the Pac-10.

This Is Iowa State University

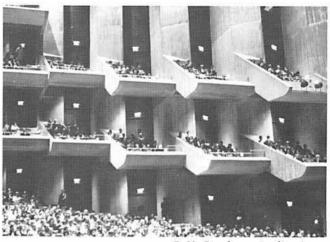

Iowa State University is the largest university governed by the State of Iowa Board of Regents. It is a major Midwestern university, and a center of learning for approximately 26,000 students from all 50 states and 85 other nations.

The picturesque campus is comfortably situated on a 1.000-acre central campus "park" and a bright new South Campus dominated by the Iowa State Center, a new football stadium, and the College of Veterinary Medicine. The central campus is a splendid combination of conventional and contemporary architectures, wooded and open land-scaping, and the impressive and idyllic Lake LaVerne. The ultra-modern South Campus boasts the ISU Center, comprised of the C. Y. Stephens Auditorium, the Fisher Theater, the Scheman Continuing Education Center, and the James Hilton Coliseum, among the finest structures of their kind in the nation.

lowa State's reputation as an institution of academic excellence unquestionably exceeds its other fine attributes. Since the day Iowa State opened its doors to students in 1858, it has been "the people's college," and has stood squarely in the midst of society's concerns. It has such renowned alumni as Vincent Antanasoff, who invented the eletronic digital computer, Carrie Chapman Catt, pioneer feminist, T. A. Wilson, chairman of the board of Boeing Aircraft, and George Washington Carver, famed scientist.

In recent years, Iowa State has become a broad-based institution, with increased academic emphasis on the humanities and arts, while maintaining its position within the scientific and technical fields.

The College of Veterinary Medicine, now in its second century, the oldest in the nation, is housed in some of the newest and most advanced veterinary medical facilities in the world. The College of Science and Humanities, the liberal arts college within the University, is the largest college at Iowa State, and is larger than any private college or university in Iowa. Students may earn undergraduate degrees in English, foreign languages and literature, history, music, and philosophy, and the departments of English and history also have thriving graduate programs.

The College of Agriculture faculty is ranked among the top three in the world, the College of Engineering is one of the largest and most distinguished in the nation, and the College of Home Economics has been a pioneer and is one of the largest in its field.

The College of Education was created in 1969 to more effectively administer the teacher education program at Iowa State, where instruction in education has been going on for nearly a century.

The College of Design, formally organized in 1978, is the newest at ISU. It brings together, in the striking, new College of Design building, curricula in art and design, architecture, landscape architecture, and community and regional planning.

Cornhusker Wheel Club 1981

Automobile dealers in Nebraska are contributing a large measure of help to the University of Nebraska athletic program through the loan of courtesy cars. Like other programs which are a part of the Cornhusker booster group activities, this project enables the Nebraska Athletic Department to make greater use of its funds. These sports-minded dealers around the state have earned a debt of gratitude from the University of Nebraska Athletic Department. They are an important part of the "team" that includes players, coaches, administration, faculty, staff, students, alumni, Husker Educational Award group, Touchdown Club, Extra Point Club, Beef Club and the courtesy car program.

'81-82 Cage Season Just Around the Corner

Husker Men Open at Wyoming

It hardly seems possible, but the start of the 1981-82 basketball season is less then two weeks away. Just one week from next Friday, the Husker men cagers open their season at Wyoming against the defending Western Athletic Conference champion Cowboys.

That kicks off a minimum 27-game schedule—a rugged slate which includes 11 contests against 1981 postseason tournament (NCAA or NIT) entries. The home portion of the schedule begins three days after the Wyoming affair, when the Huskers host Wisconsin–Stevens Point, Monday, Nov. 30. The Pointers kick off a three-game homestand that includes intrastate rival Creighton on Saturday, Dec. 5, and South Dakota State on Dec. 7. Also included on the nonconference home schedule are a pair of 1981 NCAA entries, Mid-American Conference champ Ball State on Dec. 19 and Southwestern Conference winner Arkansas, Jan. 9. The Big Eight race commences at the Bob Devaney Sports Center on Jan. 13 when the Huskers host Kansas.

The 1981-82 season promises to be an interesting one for Husker Coach Moe Iba's team. The Huskers must replace departed center Andre Smith, the Big Eight's outstanding player a year ago, but return eight of 11 lettermen from last year's 15-12 team. Included in those lettermen are three starters, guard Jack Moore, forward Kenny Walton and swingman Ray Collins. Four other returnees who saw considerable playing time last year are swingman Greg Downing, forwards Claude Renfro and Jerry Shoecraft, and guard Eric Williams. A group of seven recruits, led by guard Handy Johnson, figure to give the Huskers at least one or two starters, and good bench strength as the season goes along.

Senior Guard Jack Moore

Senior Center Janet Smith

New Faces and the NCAA for Husker Women

With just four returning veterans from last season, the Huskers, under second-year Coach Colleen Matsuhara, will be showing plenty of new faces in 1981-82.

The letter-winning quartet includes 6-2 senior Janet Smith, Nebraska's all-time leading rebounder (men or women); 6-0 junior, Kathy Hagerstrom, 1980-81's leading scorer, averaging 17.6 ppg; 5-8 junior Chris Leigh, and 5-7 sophomore, Kelli Benson, who started as a freshman last year.

Smith, Hagerstom and Benson are all returning starters, but Matsuhara claims, "All starting positions are wide open for this year."

Six freshman, comprising over half the team, will be vying for starting berths, as well as 5-10 sophomore Margie Ruetz. This year's rookies include 5-9 Regina Searcy, 5-8 Crystal Coleman, 5-5 Cathy Owen, 5-11 Terry Parriott, 6-0 Sonija Nelson and 5-10 Debra Powell.

"We anticipate being one of the youngest and smallest teams in the Big Eight with Smith at 6-2 being our tallest player and only senior on the squad, stated Matsuhara. "Many of our new players have the potential to fill important roles, but it will depend on how quickly each player can adjust to our style of play."

Furthering the challenge in 1981-82, the Huskers will be playing a very tough schedule, including a west coast swing where they will play Cal State—Fullerton and Long Beach State, as well as both Arizona and Arizona State. The Big Eight Championships will be in Manhattan, Kan., Jan. 14-16, and the Huskers will again host the Nebraska Invitational the first weekend in December.

UNL's Remodelled Temple Complex likely to be season's smash hit

Story & Photos By Bob Sheldon Office of University Information

The curtain goes up in early 1982 on UNL's Temple Theatre Complex.

More than two years in the making, produced with a $3.4 million budget and featuring a hard-hatted cast of hundreds, the renovation, restoration and renewal of Temple Complex is nearly completed.

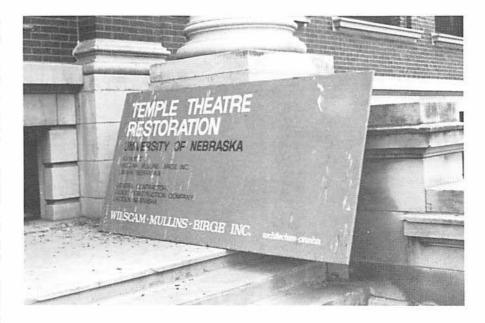

The changes that have been wrought inside the 74-year-old building at 12th and R Sts. are stupendous and spectacular, guaranteed to draw rave reviews and a hearty round of applause from students, faculty and the public.

Although the Complex's Howell stage will remain largely as it was before, except for repainting, refurbished seating, and a remodelled lobby and balcony, the rest of the building has seen carefully scripted alterations painstakingly rendered.

The results, critics say, do credit to the architects, Wilscam, Mullins, Birge, Inc., of Omaha, and to the major contractor, Olson Construction Co. of Lincoln. Their collaboration may be the most fortunate in a theatrical venture since Rogers met Hammerstein. Starting with an old premise, these professionals have taken many traditional elements and transformed them into something excitingly new from the ground up.

Much of the building's first three floors, for instance, were dismantled in order to provide facilities suitable to the modern taste of audiences, players and behind-the-scenes personnel.

The main lobby of the complex has been reconfigured so that theatregoers will enter through a new stairwell on the extreme southeast side of the building, and the new lobby, twice the size of the old one, will contain a circular ticket office with two ticket windows.

Theatregoers will enter the Temple Complex through a new entrance on the southeast side of the building. At right is the complex's new ticket office.

Where the old Temple lobby once was, there is now an expansive scene shop stretching three stories high and adjoining the Howell stage. The old scene shop was on the second floor.

Administrative offices, as well as light and set design studios, have been moved to the second floor, and the third floor will house the Studio stage, a new acting laboratory and a movement studio furnished with dance bars and mirrors.

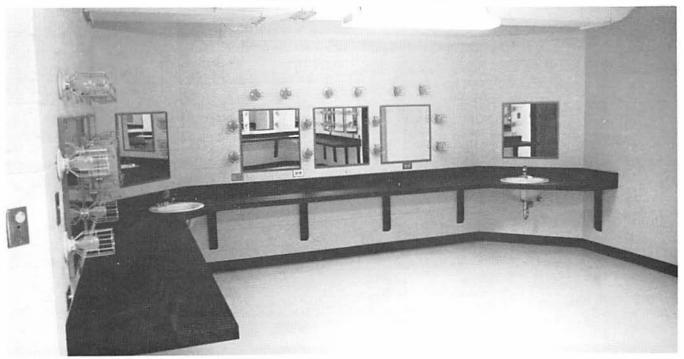

Although gala re-opening festivities are scheduled for the re-opening of Howell stage in March, the first theatre production in the new complex will be Feb. 4-13, when Moss Hart's "Light Up the Sky" will be presented on the Studio stage.

The first Howell stage production will be Henrik Ibsen's "Hedda Gabler." This stunning portrait of a fascinating woman, regarded as one of Ibsen's finest plays, will be presented March 4-13.

Re-opening festivities during the first week of March will include an Ibsen Symposium, visits by area high school classes, and a week-long open house with tours of the facility.

The complex's spacious new scene shop, right, will adjoin the Howell stage. Below, one of two large dressing rooms in the remodelled complex.

THE QUEST FOR THE RINGS.

AMERICA'S NEWEST VIDEO GAME CHALLENGE.

The Quest For The Rings is totally unlike any other video game you've ever experienced.

It combines computer technology, your TV set, and an advanced board game that transports you to a startlingly realistic Alternate World.

Your team struggles to find and control the ten precious Rings Of Power that lie hidden in danger-filled dungeons, chilling crystal caverns, infamous infernos and perilous passages.
